An artist's rendering of President Barack Obama on display at the Museum of Arts and Design in Manhattan is being used on mugs and posters.

A portrait, "Changing States," by Benjamin Shine is constructed from the material of a retired American flag.

"It seemed appropriate to use the nation's flag, the fabric of America, reconfigured to reflect the positive notions of change and the aspirations to rebuild the United States," Shine said of his work unveiled at the museum shortly after the inauguration ceremony on Jan. 20.

The art work is on display at the museum at 2 Columbus Circle. Call 212-299-7777 or click on <http://madmuseum.org/Default.aspx>

The museum gift shop and some Barnes & Noble stores <http://www.barnesandnoble.com/> also are selling puzzles and t-shirts based on the portrait.
