ROYAL MAIL POSTMARKS

Royal Mail are not only relaunching their beautiful 10:10 postmarks – they're now offering a prize as well!

Worn Again's Royal Mail bag made from a recycled storm jacket

Picked up your post today? Notice anything special? That's right, the 10:10postmark is back. Send a picture of yours to hello@1010uk.org and you could win your very own bag, made by Royal Mail's fellow 10:10ers Worn Again from old postal workers' storm jackets.

Royal Mail have been working with Worn Again over the last 6 months looking at ways to reuse their old uniforms by turning them into new products. Together they chose the storm jacket, worn by postal workers around the country, to turn into a limited edition bag.

Worn Again designed the bag, working with renowned designer Benjamin Shine, making best use of the pockets, zips and other parts of the jacket. The jackets are collected and are sent for preparation and remanufacturing in the UK. The jacket is waterproof, tough and reflective in parts, making it the perfect material to be turned into a daily-use bag.

Royal Mail are also cutting their 10%. See how they're getting staff involved here.
